What’s Outside of Your Windows?

If you just pulled back the curtains to get a better look outside, good; hold that thought. We will be coming back to those windows in a moment.

I was actually talking about the kind of Windows with a capital W. This is a family of operating systems that you probably have on your computer. (And to those of you with a Mac and no Windows, I applaud you for using a different OS that I never could get the hang of.)

For a little over a year, I have been experiencing a large part of life through Windows. That’s where I get my news (I don’t have a television!), interact with people through Zoom, and Google important stuff like what’s the average weight gain during the pandemic?

But, deep down inside, I always knew that the real part of life was happening outside of my other windows (as I pull back my curtains).

While Windows has connected us to the world during this time of separation, our Nutley community has found ways to safely interact with people in meaningful ways. The Castillo family, featured on our cover, created the Loopy Ultra to help stock the food pantry at Holy Family Church. Since races were canceled during the pandemic, including what would have been Fabian’s first 50-miler, he brought the race here and ran 100 laps around Hawthorne Ave. and Daily Ave. while food donations were dropped off.

Nutley’s Relay for Life held a fundraiser at Hyssop Beauty Apothecary that promoted love, beauty, and harmony. The theme this year is “Hope Prevails” and that is such a wonderful thought to embrace at this time in history.

Nutley’s talented little artists show off their newest masterpieces in the Kids Corner feature. I think it’s special that they share their creations with family, friends, and all of us in the magazine. Expressing yourself through art benefits both the artist and the audience and is a great way to connect with people. (Yes, even adults can do this. This may be the perfect time to resume those artistic hobbies!)

Isn’t it comforting to see that the non-virtual view outside of our Windows is still there waiting for us to resume life on a more normal basis?

And for those other windows, we can look through the glass to find some amazing things. David Wilson has aerial acrobatics, concerts, life and death struggles, trapeze artists, and Air Force-like dogfights right outside his windows. Want to find out more? Read his article; your windows may never look the same again!

Expressing yourself through art benefits both the artist and the audience and is a great way to connect with people. (Yes, even adults can do this. This may be the perfect time to resume those artistic hobbies!)

Isn’t it comforting to see that the non-virtual view outside of our Windows is still there waiting for us to resume life on a more normal basis?

Enjoy this issue and keep looking for that time when we will go back to our old operating system of handshakes, hugs, and mask-less smiles.

The Castillos with their dog Jax
If you have ever wondered if fun and fitness go together, the Castillo family — Fabian, Liz, Mia, and Eva — will show you how it's done. These Nutley neighbors have literally taken their exercise program to the streets, not only to maintain a healthy lifestyle, but to make a positive impact within the community.

It seems perfectly natural that when Fabian and Liz first met, they ran into each other.

“We met in late 2004 in a meant-to-be type of meeting as both of our plans changed that day and caused our paths to cross at a time in our lives that was right,” Liz explains.

This serendipitous meeting led to a wedding in 2007.

“We were married at St. John the Evangelist in Bergenfield, New Jersey,” Liz said.

Today, they are the happy parents of two daughters, Mia (12) and Eva (10).

Motherhood brought several changes to Liz’s life, all of which benefited the family.

“I had graduated from Montclair State University in 2005 and then I worked in the city for a few years as an underwriter for a funding company,” she said. “After the company closed, I found out I was pregnant. It was a blessing in disguise. It allowed me to not only be able to stay at home to raise my kids but also to take care of my mother who was diagnosed with Parkinson’s. She has been living with us for 13 years.”

Liz currently works part time at Fleet Feet in Montclair which she considers “her home away from home.”

Fabian’s early education started right here in Nutley.

“I attended St. Mary's Grammar School and was in the first graduating class from Good Shepherd Academy,” he said. “I then attended Queen of Peace High School and after graduating, joined the United States Marine Corps. Right now, I am working as a project executive for a high-end residential construction company in Manhattan.”

But somewhere between college and parenthood, this couple decided to make fitness a way of life.

Both Liz and Fabian have logged many miles in endurance events and each of them has a set of accomplishments that reflect their dedication.
“We both started doing Tough Mudders about eight years ago,” Liz said. “From there it escalated to Spartans and many, many road races.”

Tough Mudders challenges people to step out of their comfort zone while stretching both their physical and mental limits. It isn’t a race or based on results; it’s an endurance event series in which participants attempt 10-mile-long obstacle courses.

“My first marathon was the NYC Marathon in 2019,” she said. “In 2020, I ran it virtually. I have completed over 13 half marathons and numerous other races, including Nutley’s Chamber of Commerce 5K where I placed first in my age group. I also mentor running classes at Fleet Feet Montclair. It was at Fleet Feet that my passion for running started.”

Fabian has also competed and completed several types of events.

“I finished a full-distance Ironman, a 50-mile solo run, all levels of Triathlon courses, and ran distances from marathons to 5Ks,” he said.

But perhaps his most notable event happened right here in town during the pandemic.

“Since all races were canceled because of COVID-19, including the Dirty German Endurance Fest, in which I was supposed to complete my first 50-miler, I was looking to find a way to involve the community safely while also helping those in need,” he said. “So, I decided to run the 50 miles around our block. That’s right! It was about 100 laps around Hawthorne Ave. and Daily Ave. We called it the Loopy Ultra. We asked our running friends for their support and held a food drive for Holy Family’s food pantry which needed much help during the pandemic.”

“We had many friends who came to support Fabian,” Liz said. “They ran loops around our block with him or dropped off food and brought donations. By the time he finished the 50 miles, our living room was filled with donated items! It was incredible and truly humbling to see the generosity of everyone.”

To commemorate this event, Liz had a finisher medal made for him at Pretty Handy.

“But that wasn’t the only great thing to come out of this pandemic,” Liz added. “Fabian decided to get the know the town just a little better and ran every street in Nutley while raising money for a youth program for better meals in schools.”

Daughters Mia and Eva have been following in their parents’ running shoes by participating in several local events that promote fitness and fun.

“Both girls have been involved in Nutley’s Girls on the Run,” Liz said. “This is a great program that helps girls gain confidence and trains them for a 5K. Mia played soccer on the recreation department’s team (Fabian was their coach) and is interested in many things such as art and music. She plays the trumpet in the school band. Eva was on the town’s softball and basketball teams (Fabian coached both!) and is interested in science and music as well. She plays violin.”

And just like their father, the pandemic didn’t stop them from being active.

“Every week during the summer, the three of us hit a local trail,” Liz said. “It was great to get outside safely and enjoy nature. Perhaps we wouldn’t have done this otherwise, but it was something positive that came out of these dark times.”

Another positive in the Castillo home was the addition of a Bernedoodle puppy named Jax. She joins an anole lizard named Hei Hei whom the family got from the Nutley High School fair two years ago.

While fitness is undoubtedly the family’s passion, the benefits everyone in the family receives are not only physical.

“If there is one thing that running has taught us is that we all can do truly amazing things,” Liz said. “It is mainly about your mindset. Even when you think you can’t keep going, your mind pushes you to do what you once thought was impossible. Hard work, perseverance, and determination are how you can achieve great things in life!”

With thoughts like that running through the minds of Fabian, Liz, Mia, and Eva Castillo, it’s easy to see that these Nutley Neighbors are on a course of successful living.

Chubbs is an adorable little bulldog guy in need of a place to crash. He is about a year old and weighs under 40 pounds. This little gremlin is just as sweet as pie!! Our local shelter partner reached out to us about him because he needs some help. He is sometimes dribbling urine and having trouble controlling his bowels. We will be running diagnostics to see what the cause of this may be. For now, he is happy to waddle around in a diaper to prevent any accidents indoors. We do not know if this is something that can be fixed or if he will need a diaper indefinitely.

Chubbs absolutely adores other dogs and would be incredibly grateful if someone could open their heart and home to him. Fostering is completely free! We cover all medical costs and provide all supplies. If you’re interested in helping Chubbs, please apply today at www.jerseypitsrescue.com. If we already have your app, please email us at jerseypitsrescue@gmail.com.

At this year’s annual gathering at the Kennedy Center American College Theater Festival (KCACTF), Thomas Donohoe received the Stage Management Excellence Award. This yearly conference is an event that college theatre majors look forward to since they can participate in workshops, learn from a variety of professionals, and have an opportunity to showcase their work.

Held virtually from January 11-15, this event included everything that has come to be expected from past in-person festivals.

For Thomas Donohoe, this year’s conference held special significance. As a theatre major at Ramapo College, his department participated in the KCACTF Region 2 event and his prompt book received national recognition.

“One of the activities at the festival is the DTM Expo, where design, technology, and management students present their portfolios and projects from productions they have worked on,” he explains. “I am a stage manager and submitted my prompt book from a play that we produced last year.”

A prompt book contains the information necessary to create a theatrical production from the ground up. Creating and maintaining this book is one of the stage manager’s most important tasks since it contains everything pertaining to the production, like blocking notes, all technical cues, and any changes that have been made.

“At the festival, students can submit their work which is on display for all attendees to see,” Thomas said. “The next step is an interview and feedback sessions where you present and discuss your work with professionals. At the end of the week, different awards are given out based on their decisions.”

Thomas received the Stage Management Excellence Award, which is the highest recognition a student can get from their region.

“Usually, this means you are invited to the national festival in Washington DC, but that is on hold for the time being,” Thomas said.

At this year’s festival, his work as a stage manager for Baltimore, a virtual play held this past fall, was chosen to be shown as an invited production. He also received a certificate of merit for this work.

Thomas Donohoe will be graduating this spring and plans to pursue theatre work professionally. These awards and national recognition at KCACTF confirm his performance in this field and foreshadow his success.

His Nutley Neighbors will be sitting in the front row ready to applaud and cheer!

Story Monsters LLC announced the winners of the 2020 Royal Dragonfly Book Awards. This annual global competition honors excellence in all types of literature and book marketing, recognizing a comprehensive list of genres in 71 categories—from Pets to Poetry and LGBT to STEM.

Little Ant & the Epic Battle by Ilene Dudek was awarded honorable mention in the Picture Books 6 & Older category. This colorful picture book features a lovable little ant and his battle against an army of angry germs. Inspired by the pandemic, this modern-day fairy tale explains coronavirus in a way that children can understand: villains attack, battles are fought, and heroes emerge. In the end, the little ant tries to accomplish what others could not—to defeat the virus and save the world.

“This year’s judges had a challenging task as they reviewed and selected winners in more than 70 book and marketing categories, from Best Cover Design and Book Trailers to Humor and Graphic Novels,” said Linda F. Radke, president of Story Monsters LLC. “We are deeply honored by the huge number of submissions we received from all around the world and wish all of our award-winning authors a very sincere congratulations.”

Love, beauty, and harmony is warming the soul and lighting hope around town for Nutley’s 15th Relay for Life.

A special artistic collaboration between Denise Costantino and Diane DeBiasi recently led to the creation of limited-edition pieces for this fundraiser. Held at Hyssop Beauty Apothecary, Nutley’s Relay for Life raised funds to further the American Cancer Society’s continued research for a cure and to help those affected by cancer.

Denise Costantino, a local Nutley artist, recently completed a garden themed mural for Hyssop Beauty Apothecary. Inspired by the illustrated botanicals, she created Rose Garden Intention tea light glass holders.

“Each votive is one-of-a-kind and I hope they warm the soul and light hope in all who see them,” Denise said.

The artist used traditional gilding methods, hand leafed in gold, silver, copper, and bronze on the glass, then hand painted each one.

Hopeful Butterfly and Cheerful Cupid crystal artworks were created by Diane DeBiasi, a reiki energy practitioner, life coach, and artist. Every piece was created with the intention to embrace hope, give inner peace, and release positive energies to those caregivers, cancer survivors, and all who are battling cancer.

Heather Soto, Nutley’s Relay Event Lead, shared the significance of the theme for this 15th year.

“Hope Prevails is so meaningful for 2021 because hope never stops,” Heather said. “I am so happy to work with this collaboration of great women.”

Mary Spinelli, the owner of Hyssop Beauty Apothecary, has been incredibly supportive and signed up her HB team in the fall of 2020,” Heather said. “She also happily offered her location, at 674 Bloomfield Avenue in Nutley, to host this beautiful pop-up event. A portion of every sale from the tea lights, butterfly, or cherub will go directly to the American Cancer Society.”

Heather reminds everyone to “mark your calendars for a ‘Walk Through the Park’ on May 21, 2021, with a rain date of May 22, from 8-10pm at Memorial Park, subject to the approval of Mayor Mauro G. Tucci and the American Cancer Society.”

To stay up to date on fundraisers and events, visit their website at www.relayforlife.org/NutleyNJ.
How would you like to see aerial acrobatics, concerts, nature's hierarchy, life and death struggles, trapeze artists, and Air Force-like dogfights right outside your windows? Mythical characters, Icarus and Daedalus, were so inspired by our avian friends they made wings for an ill-fated attempt to flee Crete. Author William Turner's writings in 1545 provided this article's title. Starting a wild bird feeding program can be educational and entertaining for everyone.

Locating the feeder is paramount in giving you the best view and providing safety for the birds. For you, a spot that is visible while eating, relaxing, or doing kitchen chores is a good place to start. For the birds, an open sunny area with some nearby shelter from predators and weather. The feeding station can be pole mounted or simple branch hangers. Location should be easily accessible for refilling during snowstorms. Nearby windows should have sun catchers or other bird protection methods, as birds do not see windows as we do and are often injured or killed trying to fly through the glass. Bird droppings should be considered if locating near the house, car, or a window.

The seed selection will be based on the types of birds you want to attract. Black oil and striped sunflower, thistle, pumpkin, and safflower are good seeds to attract songbirds. Inexpensive seed mixes that include millet, milo, and corn will make a mess and attract rodents as the birds throw these seeds to the ground. Seed hearts or shelled seeds appear expensive, but you get all eatable product without the mess of shells beneath the feeder, important if feeding near a deck, sidewalk, or swimming pool. Fresh seed should be stored in metal containers to protect from mice and pantry moths.

Do Birds of a Feather Flock Together?

By David Wilson

Types of birds you will see change seasonally, while some are year-round residents. A bird guide, the internet, or chart will help you to identify the birds, food preferences, songs, and nesting habits. Binoculars and a camera will add to your experience. Having some nearby evergreens, bushes, and trees will provide nesting sites and storm shelter. Water provided in a bird bath should be changed daily and kept clean from algae and mosquitoes. An electric or solar heater prevents freezing.

Feeders can vary greatly in price and be very bird specific. Start with simple inexpensive feeders and expand as your budget allows. They should be cleaned regularly and offer various perching opportunities. Seed blocks or seed bells are another method utilizing a binding agent that clumps the seed so you can hang it in a mesh bag. Suet blocks are a great offering during cold spells. Once you commence feeding, continuing through the harsh weather will ensure the birds have a reliable food source. Squirrels and other rodents must be blocked with baffles or guards so as not to have your feeders destroyed and all the seed consumed in minutes. Follow organic practices for your lawn and garden to keep the area poison-free.

Enjoy the cardinals, blue jays, wrens, sparrows, finches, mockingbirds, nuthatches, juncos, chickadees, woodpeckers, and tufted titmice that will entertain you for hours and help answer the title question.

“Tomorrow the birds will sing. Be brave. Face life.” - Charlie Chaplin

These are the core values a community must embrace so people on the autism spectrum can, not only get by, but thrive. Becoming a productive member of society is something we all desire, for ourselves, for our children, and for all our family, friends, neighbors, colleagues, peers, and employees that make up our community.

Nutley has extended its outreach to better enable young adults on the autism spectrum to take their place in society, despite obstacles such as COVID restrictions, navigating virtual learning, and a host of other daily issues.

When Nutley started its autism program, the first children registered were just 5 and 6 years old. Those students are now graduating from high school and preparing for further education and the workforce, just like their same age peers. The Riise Program at Nutley High School, created for students ages 18 to 22, is just one of many examples of how our town is making a difference and embracing the philosophy of continued placement of these students into environments with their typical peers; whether in social activities, in the workplace, or in higher education settings.

The Riise Program fosters success through meaningful interactions and internships, where these students explore many career choices and opportunities to discover their passions. It is not a pencil and notebook setting; it is where these students master workplace skills such as computer literacy, improved focus, teamwork, virtual meeting etiquette, interview skills, and so much more.

This young adult population is, as of yet, an untapped, detail-oriented workforce. They are sharpening their focus and many of them thrive on routine and reliability, excelling in jobs that an employer might otherwise struggle to keep filled. There are young adults rising up all over this town and they are ready to face and embrace the new ways we perform our work. They have been in training for this long before COVID-19 was even a word in our vocabulary, and now, thanks to the support of so many in education and in the town, others will have to train to keep up with them! They are happy to be on time and productive members of society.

Awareness, acceptance, tolerance, inclusivity, and the celebration of diversity.

Think about it.
Spring is in the air and so is all the fresh talent of Nutley's children. These young minds are blooming, and it is absolutely refreshing to see all the positivity their projects bring us.

Oscar, age 5, has overcome many challenges over the past few months while working very hard. Every day he continues to learn new skills that make his family so proud. He is a wonderful builder, and his imagination soars as he creates incredibly detailed construction pieces. He combines his Magformers of various colors and shapes to make rockets, buildings, houses, and many more structures. His work is very impressive!

Rosemary, age 3, created this adorable coloring page of Daniel Tiger for her mom's office when she returned to work. The art will hold a special place in her mom's heart. The picture shows Daniel taking very good care of his little plush toy named Tigey. Just like in the picture, we can feel the love and happiness Rosemary felt giving this to her mom.

Jack, age 5, discovered his love for SpongeBob during quarantine and was inspired to draw his favorite characters. The drawing brought a smile to his parents' faces. Jack did an awesome job of putting together all the shapes he knows to make these fun characters come to life on paper. This young artist can look back at this time as a memory of talents he explored and family togetherness.

Jalen, age 11, dedicates a lot of his time to drawing. He loves sharing his artwork with friends and family. He sketched this powerful character which shows so much detail and effort. His artistic ability to create such detailed cartoons highlights how proud he is of his work. This creature is one of the many unique projects Jalen has made. Drawing has been a fun way for him to relax while getting creative.

Kenzie, age 3, uses all the colors in the rainbow to share some happiness here with her adorable artwork. She smiles brightly with her coloring page showing two people enjoying a meal together. We can feel the joy, especially with the fun nature themed stickers she added onto the page.

Did you just create an amazing piece of art? Whether you colored it, glued it, cut it, or even baked it, send us a photo with your name and we will print as many as we can. Let's make our world a bit more beautiful with your creations and smiles! Email me at: jcorey@bestversionmedia.com
When kids like me were growing up in Nutley in the 1950s, there were plenty of events we looked forward to, right in our own town. There were firework on the Fourth of July in the Oval, just as there are today. There were parades and the Thanksgiving Day football game, and many more special events.

But every now and then, many of us were treated to something exciting that took place across the river in New York City. I am referring to the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, traditionally held in Madison Square Garden. The history books report that way back in 1907, that circus made the Garden its official indoor venue in New York. The circus continued to delight people until it ceased operations in 2017.

A KID’S TRIP TO THE CIRCUS

Back around 1950, there was a certain customary way for a kid to go to the circus. In my house, and in my friends’, the custom was that an aunt, uncle, or a grandparent would call your parents and invite you. Your parents always agreed because it would be such a big adventure for you, and possibly because having you out of the house for a day … well, it couldn’t hurt.

It happened more than once in our house. My aunt Helen from Caldwell, my mom’s younger sister, would call and invite either my older brother David or me to go to the circus. On the day of the event, either Dave or I would put on “nice” pants and even a sports jacket and wait for her to arrive. Even though the Lincoln Tunnel had been built a decade earlier in 1937, my recollection was that we would somehow end up taking the Hoboken “Tubes” (now called the PATH Train) into Manhattan, and then walk up to the old Garden on 34th Street.

It was so exciting to arrive. The experience began when you got a box of peanuts in their shells (Aunt Helen spent the whole day buying stuff for us), which you fed to elephants who were lined up in an arcade area. They stuck out their trunks and inhaled the nuts right out of your hand. Lions and tigers were on view too, but in cages farther away. The next thing that my aunt bought was a box of Cracker Jack which was for us, not for the elephants. I remember it all - the animal acts, the trapeze artists, the ringmaster, the clowns with their big floppy shoes. I remember the aroma of the sawdust that covered the floors, and the distant smell of elephants.

Finally, and somewhat sadly, the performance came to an end. But there were still more things to buy. I always came home with a pennant that had the circus’s name brightly printed on it. And one year, I somehow influenced Aunt Helen to buy me one of the little tan chameleons that were on sale, each peering out somewhat mournfully from a cellophane window in its little cardboard box. (You also had to buy a small box of dried dead flies to feed to your chameleon when you got home.)

My mom was somewhat grumpy when I arrived home with my chameleon and dried flies. I was so excited. Aunt Helen left for Caldwell, leaving Mom to figure out how to keep my chameleon alive. My dad made a little wooden box to keep him in.

But for a little kid, a trip to the circus made for a big adventure, and a perfect day. If you got to go there too, I know you will share one of my most cherished childhood memories.

The Nutley Historical Society is looking forward to welcoming you and your family back to the Nutley Museum soon! For more information, visit www.nutleyhistoricalsociety.org

Weight Loss Support Group
@virtual event from Clara Maass Medical Center
You’re not in it alone, and perhaps one of the most important aspects of a comprehensive weight loss surgery program is the after-surgery support group. Attending a support group allows you to share your own personal experiences in open discussion and enables you to participate with your peers who are going through a similar situation. The support group addresses topics to assist you along your weight loss journey including snacking, meal portions, and self-esteem, to name just a few.
Time: 6:30-7:30pm
For more information and to register visit the Clara Maass Medical Center Calendar at www.rwjbh.org/events/
